FALLEN LEADER TO BE BURIED WEDNESDAY

CROWDER STILL IN COUNTY JAIL HERE

Officials Are Checking Up on Statements in Confession

SHERIFF RHYNE IS HERE MONDAY

Local Authorities Are Willing to Permit His Return There

Arthur Crowder, who Saturday made a statement to local officers regarding the killing of a man named Ford in Gastonia, North Carolina, today was still in the Morgan county jail, while negotiations were being conducted between Sheriff Rhyme, of Gaston County, North Carolina, who is here, officials in Gastonia and local authorities concerning future procedure in the case. Sheriff Rhyme originally had intended to leave with the prisoner for North Carolina Sunday, but this plan was discarded later. Crowder, who is charged with forgery here, was alleged to have victimized several merchants in check transactions.

It was stated that a large reward was offered at Gastonia for the apprehension and conviction of the slayer of Ford and it is in connection with the reward offer that present negotiations are in progress. Officers also are seeking to check up on some of the statements of Crowder one of which concerned his alleged departure from Gastonia after Ford was killed, his flight to Greensboro, North Carolina, and his stay at a hotel in that city. Local officials stated they were currently willing to permit Crowder's return to North Carolina, if authorities in Gastonia are convinced that Crowder is implicated in the Ford killing. He admits. At the same time they desired to collect reward money in order that local people may be reimbursed for losses sustained in connection with his alleged check transactions in this territory.

Gastonia people were said to have told officers here they would guarantee the payment of $500 if Crowder is convicted of killing Ford. Crowder has made a signed statement to officials, including Solicitor C. Almon in which he admitted that he was in a party of three, alleged to have shot Ford to death in 1921. He named two others as members of the party, but officials desired their names be withheld until the allegations of the statement can be checked up and it proven correct, the principals can be placed in custody.

EDGAR FENNELL IS DEAD OF WOUND

CALL RECEIVED BY POPULAR RECTOR

Funeral services for Edgar Fennell, who died at the Benevolent hospital Saturday night, were held at Belle Mina Sunday, with interment at Belle Mina. The deceased was brought to the hospital about 11:30 o'clock Saturday suffering from a gun shot wound in the leg, the shot, it is said being fired by his father, Charles Fennell, at the family residence in Belle Mina about 3 o'clock Saturday morning.

Young Fennell died following loss of blood.

Village Almost Wrecked by Wind

(Associated Press)
CONWAY, Ark., Feb. 4—The village of Wooster, eight miles north of here was almost totally destroyed by a storm last night. Three general mercantile stores, two blacksmith shops, the school, the postoffice, three residences and a number of barns were partially, if not completely destroyed. By a whim of fate, nobody was injured.

STILL DESTROYED

Federal prohibition Officer Hampton and Ben Poole, deputy sheriff of Morgan County recently seized a 75 gallon still in the southern part of the county near Gandy's Cove.

DECATUR'S NEW HIGH SCHOOL IS OCCUPIED

Informal Program to Be Followed Later By Dedication

SEVERAL MAKE SHORT SPEECHES

Pupils Congratulated on Fine Appearance Already Made

Upon the occasion of the students of the Decatur high school entering the new high school building, this morning, informal exercises were held in the new auditorium of the school.

Later it was explained a formal dedication of the building is expected when one or more distinguished educators will be invited to make addresses.

Prof. W. W. Benson superintendent of the schools, presided and introduced the speakers. The devotional exercises were conducted by Dr. James D. Wallace, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. A number of musical selections were rendered including solos by C. H. Johnson.

In behalf of the city board of education of Decatur, Fred S. Hunt made an address in which he congratulated the students and faculty upon the good appearance already made at the new school, and encouraged all to take a lively interest in beautifying the building and the surrounding grounds. John A. Thomason, in behalf of the city council, spoke at some length on the value of education and stated the city council could be depended upon to cooperate in every way possible.

Mr. Thomason made special reference to the streets about the building, saying they should be maintained in first class condition.

Dr. S. D. Steele, pastor of the First Methodist church made an address also, in which the veteran minister referred feelingly to the recent death of Woodrow Wilson.

It was announced today that Miss Lillian Odom has been named librarian for the new school.

VENIZELLOS QUILTS; FORM NEW CABINET

(Associated Press)
ATHENS, Greece, Feb. 4—Premier Venizelos and his cabinet resigned office today.

A new ministry will be formed by M. Kafandaris, former minister of the interior.

EDGAR FENNELL IS DEAD OF WOUND

CALL RECEIVED BY POPULAR RECTOR

Rev. T. G. Mundy, rector of St. John's Episcopal church of Albany has under consideration a call to become rector of the Grace Episcopal church at Morganton, N. C. This is the second call received by Rev. Mundy within the last month to become rector of Episcopal churches. About the time Bishop Coadjutor McDowell preached here two weeks ago. Rev. Mundy declined a call from a St. Louis church similar to the call from the Grace church at Morganton. The local rector is now serving his seventh year as rector of St. John's Episcopal church. Since he came here, Rev. Mundy has greatly increased the membership and activities of that church, and the community at large would regret to see the popular rector leave the Twin Cities.

TWO ALARMS

The Albany department answered two alarms over the weekend. Sunday evening at 9:20 o'clock, the department was called to extinguish a gasoline fire which threatened destruction of a car belonging to A. B. Dobbins. At 7:05 this morning the frame residence of D. M. Mitchell, 1308 Fourth avenue South suffered slight damage from sparks on the roof.

Hull Will Fight Action On Offer

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—A resolution seeking early consideration by the house of the McKenzie bill, authorizing acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals, will meet with opposition by Representative Hull when it comes before the house rules committee.

The resolution introduced by Mr. McKenzie, Representative Hull declared, would hurry the matter too much. Mr. Hull declared it was an outrage to ask for consideration of the bill before the hearings of the house military committee have been published.

He added that the departments of war and agriculture should be given time to study all offers made as these departments would be vitally interested in the Shoals lease.

LOCAL CHURCHES WAGE DRIVES TO COLLECT FUNDS NOW DUE

A number of the churches of the cities are now in the midst of campaigns for completing the collection of money coming due this year, as pledged during the last five years. The Baptists expect to pay their pledge of $75,000,000 by the close of this year. The Methodists are sending out committees to collect money pledged by their members to the Centenary Movement fund. The Presbyterians are holding meetings, preparatory to a final campaign for money due on the new era fund.

A largely attended meeting was held at the First Methodist church Sunday night when a pageant was given which brought vividly to the attention of the people present the claims of the church missions. Every Baptist church of this community is now in the midst of a week's effort to arouse enthusiasm for the payment of all money pledged to their $75,000,000 fund. One of the most impressive statements regarding financial obligations and religious life was given by Dr. W. P. Reeves at the Central Baptist church Sunday night before a large congregation. "We are all in the same fix," said Dr. Reeves, in speaking of all churches now due to pay their money obligations. Dr. Reeves' sermon subject was: "Under Test."

He first spoke of Abraham's testings, then of those that came to Job, then of testings that come to men and women and churches today. Dr. Reeves said with great emphasis near the close of his discourse, "God does not care for those who serve Him in prosperous times, and who neglect his cause during hard times; He does not care for the fellow who is true one day and false the next; He does not care for anybody who is not sincere to the very core."

Refers to New Nation
In beginning his discourse Dr. Reeves said in part:

"When God decided to make himself known again to a world that had once known him and had forgotten him he decided to start a new nation, a nation that would know Him, and teach him to other nations. "He would start that nation with one man, but before beginning it he would thoroughly test that man to see whether he would prove worthy to be the progenitor of that nation."

"Abraham was subjected to many tests, each test growing more and more severe, until he proved himself worthy by his willingness to offer up his only son as a burnt offering because God commanded it. He stood the test, and God poured out his blessings without measure upon him."

Eyes Of Nations Moist As Death Calls Great War Chief To Beyond

WOODROW WILSON FINDS IN ETERNITY HIS HAVEN OF REST

In the Prayerful Quiet of a Sunday Morning Death Enfolded Him

HIS SOUL PASSES AS BODY SLEPT

Knew the End was Near and Told Loved Ones He Was Ready

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Woodrow Wilson has found in eternity a haven from the storms and sorrows of a troubled world.

In the prayerful quiet of a Sunday morning, death folded him gently in its embrace and bore him to his maker. He passed from life while he slept, with those he loved best close about him. His broken body had weakened little by little until the last spark of his vitality went out, but his spirit was supported to the last by the indomitable courage of the old fighting days.

In his last moments he told his loved ones he knew the end had come and he was ready.

The general government of the United States has already offered to whatever is fitting to express the nation's reverence at the passing of one of its greatest leaders.

President Coolidge called yesterday at the house of bereavement expressing his regret and then issued a proclamation of 30 days of official mourning. Over the white house the government department, on the nation's fighting ships at sea and over the outposts of American diplomacy in foreign lands, the stars and stripes were brought to half mast.

Congress today recessed in respect for his memory and the whole machinery of the government, whose guiding genius he was for eight momentous years, was still.

The plan of entombment has not been selected, but it is probable that the body will be placed for a while in a Washington cemetery. There it will await the erection of a memorial to serve as his last resting place and to perpetuate fittingly in stone, the memories of those great days of crises when the whole world hung on his words.

Today the frayed remnants of his mortality lies in the chamber whose walls looked down yesterday on the last scene of a career that had known all the heights and depths of human emotions. In death he appeared as if in peaceful slumber, his features serene and composed and his square jaw set with old determination. But the lines are somewhat deeper and heavier and the flashing fire of his eye was gone out forever.

The bed on which Woodrow Wilson died and where his body rests is of massive oak, a reproduction of the bed built at the white house for Lincoln and used by every president since. It is of unusual length and has a golden American eagle over the head. It was made to order for Mr. Wilson before he retired from the presidency.

Although he had not known a well day since he crossed the threshold of his place of retirement, or for months before, last Friday saw the beginning of the end of his long illness. His collapse during his western speaking trip in 1919, followed by a stroke of paralysis soon afterward made him almost an invalid long ago.

Early last week a slight digestive disorder further weakened his vitality and on last Friday, Dr. Grayson found his condition steadily growing.

Highlights in Career of the Fallen Chief

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Woodrow Wilson's life was marked by these milestones:

Born at Staunton, Va., December 28, 1856.

Graduated at Princeton University, 1879.

Selected as president of Princeton, August 1, 1902, after seventeen years as college professor.

Elected governor of New Jersey, November 10, 1910.

Nominated for president in democratic national convention, Baltimore, July 2, 1912.

Elected president, November 4, 1912.

Inaugurated March 4, 1913.

Re-elected president, November 7, 1916.

Asked congress to declare war on Germany, April 2, 1917.

Sailed for France, December 4, 1918, as head of American peace commission.

Signed treaty of Versailles, June 28, 1919.

PROCLAMATION BY PRES. COOLIDGE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—President Coolidge's proclamation on the death of Woodrow Wilson follows:

"By the President of the United States of America:

"A proclamation:

"To the people of the United States:

"The death of Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States from March 4, 1913, to March 4, 1921, which occurred at 11:15 o'clock today at his home at Washington, District of Columbia, deprives the country of a most distinguished citizen, and is an event which causes universal and genuine sorrow. To many of us it brings the sense of a profound personal bereavement.

"His early profession as a lawyer was abandoned to enter academic life. In this chosen field he attained the highest rank as an educator, and has left his impress upon the intellectual thought of the country. From the presidency of Princeton university he was called by his fellow citizens to be the chief executive of the state of New Jersey. The duties of this high office he so conducted as to win the confidence of the people of the United States, who twice elected him to the chief magistracy of the republic. As President of the United States he was moved by an earnest desire to promote the best interests of the country as he conceived them. His acts were prompted by high motives and his sincerity of purpose cannot be questioned. He led the nation through the terrible struggle of the World war with a lofty idealism which never failed him. He gave utterance to the aspiration of humanity with an eloquence which held the attention of all the earth and made America a new and enlarged influence in the destiny of mankind.

"In testimony of the respect in which his memory is held by the government and the people of the United States, I do hereby direct that the flags of the White House and of the several departmental buildings be displayed at half mast.

SIMPLE CEREMONY FOR EX-PRESIDENT THE PRESENT PLAN

Friends and Associates Will Be Designated as Pallbearers

WHITE HOUSE OFFERS ITS AID

Secretary Weeks Asks for Suggestions of Relatives

(Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Tentative plans for the funeral of former President Wilson, as announced by Dr. Grayson, provide for a brief private service from the S street residence at 3 p. m. on Wednesday.

This service will be followed by another at 3:30 o'clock in the Bethlehem chapel in the cathedral at Mount St. Albans, where the body will be placed in a vault until arrangements have been made as to a final resting place.

The funeral services will be conducted both at the home and at the chapel by the Rev. James H. Taylor.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Funeral services for former President Woodrow Wilson will be held Wednesday and probably will be private, in the sense that there will be no great state ceremony.

A large number of friends and former associates will be designated as active and honorary pallbearers. Among them are: Bernard M. Baruch, Vanne McCormick, Cleveland H. Dodge, Cyrus McCormick, some of the members of Mr. Wilson's cabinet and others who were associated with him during his terms in the white house.

The Rev. Jas. S. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church which Mr. Wilson attended during his residence in Washington, probably will deliver the funeral sermon.

White house officials again today were in communication with the Wilson home to render what assistance Secretary Weeks called on relatives of the president to talk over any plans they might have in mind for a military guard at the funeral and entombment.

FIVE SOLDIER CASES CONTINUED TODAY

(Associated Press)
HAMILTON, Ala., Feb. 4—Cases against Glenn Stephens and four other former members of the Alabama National Guard, charged with murder in connection with the lynching of William Baird, near Jasper in 1921, today were continued indefinitely by Judge Almon.

Juries which heard the case of Joseph Key and Roy Patton last week are still deliberating. The jury in the Key case has been locked up since Wednesday. The jury which heard the Patton case has deliberated since Friday.

Word was sent by the Key jury to Judge Almon that it was hopelessly deadlocked. The court decided to hold both juries intact for further deliberation. No direct word has come from the Patton jury.

The defense objected to continuance of the cases.

Horace C. Wilkinson, special assistant attorney general, was not in court when the continuance was asked and granted.

GREAT MAN SILENCED

Woodrow Wilson has fallen into his last sleep and has passed from American life forever. The places that knew him shall know him no more.

The grief manifested on every side when the first news of the former President's rapid decline became known told plainer than can words of the love and esteem in which he was held. The human element in Mr. Wilson was strong enough in him to cause him to draw close to humanity and also to attract humanity close to him. Some claimed to believe at the time he first became a public figure—about the time he became a candidate for the presidency the first time, that much learning had drawn him apart from the world of men and of large affairs. But the success which he attained in solving great and vexing problems of statesmanship during his first term as President soon demonstrated that his being a scholar did not prevent Mr. Wilson from being a great man and a great statesman.

One single example of the constructive ability of Mr. Wilson—the federal reserve banking system—need be mentioned to recall how skillful he was in his efforts to restore our financial affairs to representatives of the people.

Before his first term as President had expired the great war had broken up the world in such a fury as to threaten the very existence of established civilization. He kept America out of that war until the evils it brought were about to spread throughout the entire world. When it became clear to Mr. Wilson that the makers of that war would not and evidently could not recognize any appeal save force and still more force, he led his country into that most destructive of all human conflicts, and the whole nation rallied to his support.

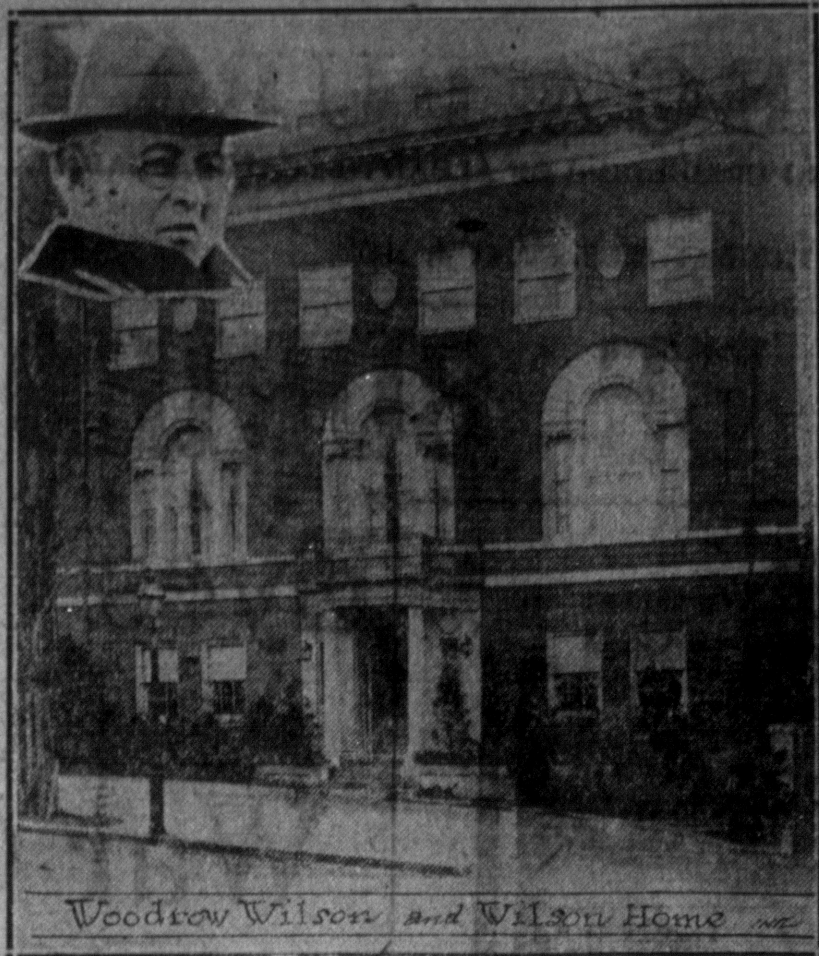

It will take many volumes of history to tell of what towering success Mr. Wilson became as the commander of the army and navy of the greatest nation that ever went to war.

The war over, Mr. Wilson continued to give of his life and his strength to destroy the possibility of another such conflict.

About four years ago, due to the tremendous efforts he had made against war, all but his mighty intellect and his unconquerable spirit gave away, and he the once most powerful man of the world and of all time, became an invalid, a shut-in, far removed from the activities of which he was such a vital part during the most terrible and stirring times of all history.

And now, after he had emerged from the seclusion of his home a few months ago long enough to deliver a great message over radio to the American people. Mr. Wilson's voice is stilled. Although his voice is stilled, Woodrow Wilson's influence goes on forever. He is not dead. There is no death for such great men. Mr. Wilson is one of the all too few great men, who was a religious man and also a thoroughly good and lovable man. He clung to the great truths of the Bible. He once said of that Book, that it had "counseled the doubtful, upheld the weak and comforted the sorrowful." He once said of religion as it is conceived by Christian America: "Religion, conceive it but liberally enough, is the true salt to keep both learning and philosophy sweet against the taint of time and change." The life of Mr. Wilson was a triumphant one, despite the fact a selfish world refused to support many of his noble measures. He was a great prophet of a greater and a better world to come.

WOODROW WILSON'S HOME IN CAPITAL

WOODROW WILSON

The great leader is dead, as much a casualty of the war as any hero that died on the field of battle. After the war was ended and the men had laid down their arms, he it was who never faltered or failed to carry on, and who did carry on, strongly and dauntlessly, scornful of obstacles and regardless of obstructiveness, until his mortal body could no longer stand up under the lash of his relentless will.

The tragedy of it all was that he did not survive to behold the consummation of his aspirations and the fulfillment of his vision. While the people were exalted to a higher plane because of war, Woodrow Wilson's ideal of a world covenant for permanent peace took firm hold upon the public mind and brought forth universal popular approval, both in this continent and in Europe. Through his eyes they beheld a vision of the promised land, such as theretofore the great masses of the people of the globe had scarcely even dreamed of.

When, however, there came the inevitable relaxation from the strain of war, the people for a time forgot the sterner facts of existence in the comfort of mental restfulness. Then it was that the enemies swooped down upon the great leader and compelled him to fight for that which should have come about by popular acclaim. That for which he fought was the wider democracy—the application in a practical way of those views that men have acknowledged as right and just since the beginning of time. Woodrow Wilson challenged the whole world to do what the whole world for ages had admitted should be done. Peace on earth and good will towards all mankind had long been accepted as an ideal toward which mankind should aspire. But nobody had ever done anything about it. Woodrow Wilson's message to the whole world was that it should no longer postpone what the whole world had long agreed ought to be done.

But the fortunate fact is that though Woodrow Wilson has departed this life, he has left behind him a heritage that will continue to augment and to enlarge the scope of its benefits through all the ages to come. Though there have been those who scoffed, and still are, yet the number of those who believe that the great vision can be made reality grows and grows. It is a sad thing that the United States has played the role of a bystander in the great drama of human conquest over human habit and human baser impulses, a drama in which five-sixths of the governments of the world, and four-fifths of the earth's people are taking part. Yet Woodrow Wilson conceived that drama, and he cast therein a role that can be played only by his native land, and which eventually his native land will some time come to play to make the company complete.

Woodrow Wilson is dead, yet being dead he still lives in that one thing which he deemed essential—the democracy of the nations and the brotherhood of mankind. When history is written, it will say that the victory went, not to those who triumphed with armies, but to those who made that peace secure by laying the foundation for such perfect international understanding as would eventually wipe war from among the nations and strengthen those human bonds that know no race nor creed nor lineage when questions of justice, of right and of wrong are the issue. And among those who encouraged strength and almost super-

FOREIGNERS FORGET DIFFERENCES

Even before it became known that President Wilson had breathed his last, expressions of affection and regard appeared beyond number, not only in America, but in the press of many foreign countries. Some of the statements made by leaders of thought, are as follows:

The London Dispatch says:

"Woodrow Wilson's critical illness was an outstanding feature of the world's news in the newspapers this morning. The dispatches from Washington were printed under prominent headlines, and the introductory paragraphs recalled the activities of the ex-President in war and peace.

"Mr. Wilson has a great number of friends and admirers here who maintain that when the influence of political rivalries had passed, history will endorse the contention of many writers in this country that he belongs in the category of the great Presidents."

The Petit Journal of Paris thus summed up French opinion of Mr. Wilson on Saturday:

"Soon the great voice of the idealist, the democratic pacifist, will be stilled forever. Woodrow Wilson, the man who brought the United States into the World war and saved France from the iron heel of a German conqueror.

"Wilson, lying on his sick bed, has witnessed the crash of his works, but France remembers him only with sympathy."

The Premier of Great Britain, McDonald, said: "This is a moment when partisanship and party allegiance sink into insignificance.

"The whole English nation is standing with held breath, waiting for further word of this great American.

"What is great and inspiring in the actions of public men belongs not to parties, not to nations, but the whole of humanity."

The Prince of Wales, leading statesman and diplomat, and all the gathering at the dinner, sat in solemn silence as McDonald spoke of the nation's grief at the illness of the world leader.

"Wilson's work will live forever," the Premier said.

From Italy, Germany and Central Europe came the expressions:

"The Italian press and public join in sympathy, recognizing the undoubted sincerity of the Wilson policies.

"Scores of telegrams were sent to the American embassy.

"In Germany, the nation which blamed Wilson more than any other for her defeat in the great war, the newspapers had nothing but sympathy.

"Throughout Central Europe comment was much the same—all recognized Woodrow Wilson in death as one of the outstanding figures of the age."

In view of continued uprisings in Mexico, the trust of many Americans that revolts in that country will finally be put down is gradually ebbing away.

A safe bet—that it will take mighty big news to crowd Muscle Shoals off the front page until Mr. Coolidge takes final action on a bill, passed by both House and Senate, disposing of the pro-

GOOD ROADS DEMANDED BY THE PEOPLE.
ESPECIALLY A REAL "BEE LINE" ROAD

Roads in prospect, promised good roads and merely dreams of passable roads the whole year around, are proving very unsatisfactory to the people of the entire country, whether in Alabama or in some other state; whether in Morgan or some other county. With the opening of spring, unless something very definite is done for the public roads, the people generally will become very discontented and discouraged regarding better roadway conditions. Replying to a recent editorial in The Birmingham News urging that Alabama be gotten out of the mud, Chairman Rogers of the state highway commission said that he was in thorough sympathy with the demand for better roads, and continued:

"The commission knows that if it does not build more roads in the next three years than were built in Alabama in the last three it will be severely criticised.

"The Alabama Highway Commission has no authority to sell Alabama road bonds.

"These bonds are in the custody of and their sale under the control of the State Bond Commission.

Unless the State Bond Commission authorizes the sale of road bonds highways cannot be built.

"It takes money, and lots of it, to build first-class, hard-surfaced roads.

"It would be criminally wasteful to build any other kind than a first-class road connecting the great cities of Alabama with Muscle Shoals.

"The State Bond Commission is composed of Gov. W. W. Brandon, the chairman of the Highway Department and of Hon. Harwell G. Davis, attorney general.

"If these gentlemen will sell the road bonds the highway commission will build the roads."

Mr. Rogers seems to pass the responsibility for the future as regards better roads upon the shoulders of the state bond commission. If it is the plac of that commission to make the next move for better roads, it will be expected to do so. In the meantime it will be remembered Mr. Rogers belongs to the bond commission.

The reference of Chairman Rogers to Muscle Shoals is especially interesting to people of the Tennessee valley. He said, as quoted:

"It would be criminally wasteful to build any other kind than a first-class road connecting the great cities of Alabama with Muscle Shoals."

One of the roads connecting Alabama cities with the Tennessee valley and the Muscle Shoals is the Bee Line highway, which passes through the Twin Cities.

GOING TO WORK

From the time I was six years old and started out to school until the time when I got married and started keeping house, it was part of my routine to get up and get dressed, eat breakfast and go somewhere in the early morning. The two years before I married Bill I walked to the school house where I taught every day, rain or shine, hail or snow.

And many a morning since I've been married have I wished, when I rose, that I had to get dressed and hurry and walk off somewhere, past the farm and school house, a couple of miles or so, to my work. For the love of the outdoors, and the meeting it in all weathers is in my blood, and will never be wiped out. Yet many days my duties keep me in the house from dawn to dark and, in spite of the honest effort to get out, the days sometimes slip by one after the other and I am scarcely out of doors, with all this open country around me.

I'm not willing to admit that there are any disadvantages in being married, but if I did admit one, it would be this—that the wife and mother rises in the midst of her work—her family and her duties are upon her often before the clothes are on her back—and she retires also in the midst of it, often taking off at bedtime the very apron that she tied about her waist before breakfast.

It's nice to go to work—to get up and dress and go out of doors for a brisk walk in the morning freshness, and to come home again in the fall of the dusk to lighted lamps and a singing kettle.

But then, if mother wasn't home to do those breakfast dishes, and wasn't there to put the kettle on, perhaps the rest of the world couldn't have the joy of going to work and coming home again, and better for some of us to have it than none of us at all.—Farm Life.

CHRISTIAN COUNCIL TO NAME OFFICE

At a meeting held Sunday after at the Decatur Baptist church of Protestant Christian Council, by unanimous vote, a resolution was adopted to continue the work of the council, and Judge L. P. Troup, the chairman, was authorized to appoint a standing committee to bring in plans for the council at its next meeting, which is to be held at 2:30 o'clock, Sunday, February 10, at the Decatur Baptist church.

Judge Troup named the following men for that committee: T. M. chairman, Judge F. M. Hamilton, L. Maury, Rev. S. D. Monroe and F. Lovin.

The council voted unanimously a resolution presented by Rev. Monroe, pledging anew the support of the council to law enforcement especially as regards the observance of the Christian Sabbath, evangelism, child welfare work and to effort to relieve the needy.

Four committees are to be appointed in connection with these four departments of Christian activity, and Judge Troup, Committee of council are expected to call upon local merchants, especially the grocers, and ask them to close stores on Sundays from 10:30 a. m. until noon.

His Haven of Rest

more serious. He refused nourishment and by Saturday night he was unconscious. At nine o'clock he awoke and never wakened again. It was at 11:15 a. m. Sunday his life finally went out. From first to the last he was without and in his last wakeful moments appeared to be resting in comfort. As the end approached little group watching in the sick room drew nearer to him.

Mrs. Wilson sat on the bed with him, with his almost lifeless hand in hers. Nearby was his daughter, Margaret Wilson, and Grayson, faithful in his ministrations since the first signs of illness years ago, watched for some time at last to help him at last as he lay on the bed, but there was nothing more to be done. More and more feeble the pulse beat. There was a paling of the breath. Little by little death was completing its conquest, faint twitches, almost like a smile, the wasted features and the great war president had but last, the long weakened fetters bound it to the earth.

Thus, he who had dreamed a dream of peace for all the world found peace for himself and left behind him a world still tossed by and turmoil. To his, against life had turned at last, after a long journey through paths of greatest found death gentle and even meek. Thus, with a soft chanting of floating in on the Sabbath air written the last letter of that noble chapter of human history, praising the life of Woodrow Wilson.

The number attending the meeting class at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday morning was 107, a considerable increase over last Sunday's attendance. The class expressed hope and belief, that with the weather the attendance would reach over 200 as was the case the regular winter weather. Rev. S. D. Monroe, pastor of the Baptist church of Albany will be the class next Sunday; it was announced by Rev. Noble R. Edwards, regular teacher of the class. Rev. Edwards spoke from the 12th chapter of John, and on next Sunday Rev. Troup will speak from the 13th chapter of that book.

The business session of the class was presided over by C. W. Maury, president. The usual song was held before and after the session.

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Adele Garrison's New Phase of Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Harriet Made a Graceful but—For Her—Unusual Admission.

I KNEW better than to answer even by a "thank you" the compliment my mother-in-law had paid me but a minute before. (Dicky once said of his mother that "when that doughty dame was dispensing the high justice, the middle and the low, it was no time for any more relative to butt in," and I always have remembered—and headed—the irreverent comment. Moreover, the tribute she gave me was not a new one. She always has been kind enough to approve of the way I dress Junior, and I was not surprised to have her willing to turn over the sartorial details of her orphaned grandchildren to me.

The Question of Mourning. "You'll have no time to waste," Mother Graham went on. "I hate to hurry you away, Harriet. It seems as though we hadn't had any visit at all, but you know as well as I the need for haste. Can you get that late afternoon train, girls? Then you will be able to start in at the shops early to-morrow morning."

"What do you think?" Harriet turned to me. "Shall we be able to secure that apartment over you again? We gave it up, you know, when we came out here."

"I can find out in fifteen minutes," I promised her and, excluding myself, I went to the telephone and called up the obliging janitor of the apartment which was our New York home.

"No, dot that she not rented yet," came the rich, rolling voice, which fits so well the janitor's round body. "Two or three folks look at her, but she not suit. Sure, I get her all ready for you to-night."

Harriet was already in the throes of packing when I reported this conversation, while Mother Graham, two spots of bright color in her cheeks, hovered over her and Lillian.

THE HOME KITCHEN

Winter Vegetables One May Prepare In Unusual Ways

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking

THE home cook cannot have too many recipes for winter vegetables, as most families like variety. Canned vegetables and winter vegetables all offer material for excellent dishes if carefully prepared. The French people, for instance, are very fond of dried lima beans, which are like the potato and takes the place of potatoes for an occasional serving. The artichoke is prepared in the way any potato dish would be. It is often confused with the leaf artichoke, with flower-like head, which belongs to the thistle family. These are boiled in salted water and eaten by dipping the fleshy ends of the leaves in tartar or other sauce. The bottoms of this variety are also used in salads. Before boiling leaf artichokes twenty-five minutes in salted water let them stand in cold salted water to draw out any bugs that may hide between the thick leaves.

Jerusalem Artichokes. Wash and pare as many artichokes as are needed and boil them in salted water until they are tender. Drain, then slice them in thick slices and serve them with melted butter in which a little chopped parsley is scattered, or serve them with a cream sauce.

Asparagus in Ramkins. Open, drain and rinse a can of asparagus tips, then cut them in small pieces. Cover them with boiling water and bring them to the boiling point, then drain them. Add a lump of butter, pepper, salt, a beaten egg, a half teaspoonful of sugar, two tablespoonsful of dry crumbs and a quarter of a cupful of sweet cream. Fill baked ramkins lightly with the mixture and sprinkle them with a little grated cheese. Bake the asparagus about twelve minutes.

Parsnips. Scrape and boil as many parsnips as are needed. When they are tender, slice them into rather thick slices, dip them in beaten egg and then in seasoned crumbs and fry them. Also the parsnips may be diced or sliced and creamed. Again, they may be prepared in the same way as asparagus tips in ramkins.

Dried Lima Beans. Soak a pint of dried lima beans overnight. In the morning put them into fresh water and let them boil until they are tender. Drain them and add a lump of butter, pepper, salt, a dessertspoonful of sugar and two tablespoonsful of vinegar. Serve the beans hot. Or after boiling the beans may be put into a buttered baking dish with a square of well-seasoned salt pork, seasoned with a cupful of molasses, two tablespoonsful of sugar, pepper and salt, and a very appetizing way to cook cauli-flowers.

Fried Cauliflower. Trim and boil in slightly salted water a firm head of cauliflower until it is just tender, then remove it and cool it. When it is time to cook the vegetable for dinner, slice it in rather thick slices down through the flower, dip it in beaten egg, then in very fine crumbs, well seasoned, and fry it. Make a sauce of sour cream with a thickening of butter and flour. This is a Norwegian recipe and is a very appetizing way to cook cauliflower.

Red Cabbage Salad. Remove the outer leaves from a small red cabbage, cut out all the hard heart, then slice it thin with a cutter. Pare and slice thinly one Spanish onion and mix it with the cabbage. Make a French dressing, toss the cabbage in it and add a teaspoonful of well-washed capers.

WITH CAP AND BELLS -- By Juanita Hamel

CUPID, do you even play the jester? Do you seek to entertain the Queen whose court is the world of men and whose majesty and beauty make her ruler? You shouldn't! Suppose the members of her court were to spy you with your cap and bells? What cruel disillusionment! Besides, you know, cap and bells do not harmonize with angel wings. Are you, too, Queen Beauty's slave? Then do not loop to cap and bells. The Queen tires of her jester and his puns. But when you are your lovable self—ah, that's another matter.

WINIFRED BLACK GETS A LETTER About Happiness and Marriage

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:— I have just read your article, "The Sadness That Lies in Wait," and I find that I either do not understand the thing, or else if it means what I take it to mean, then I do not agree with the doctor. In the case, it seems unfinished, or lacking in something to me. Just what that something is I can't tell.

Why should a young engaged couple deserve sympathy, at least in the way the doctor puts it? I am sure that if after a few years of married life the old couple in the story had thought the same of each other as the doctor predicts the young couple are going to think, then these two sweet old people surely would have separated long ago, or at any rate they would not be so much together.

Each other. Don't you think that the doctor is either an old grouch or is really telling his own thoughts in regard to his married life? What a happy time those two, the doctor and his wife, must have together! No wonder she ended with a smile and he with a sigh.

I am a young girl and I am engaged to the best man in the world. We have gone together for six years and we are both convinced that ours is not "Puppy Love." We are dead in love with each other, but we are not so selfish as to think that nothing else matters but ourselves. We think of the serious side of matrimony as well as the other side. And I am sure that you will agree that the average young American couple is not selfish to such a great extent either.

Of course there are people in the world who can only see the present, but most of us, I am sure, think into the future and what it will be before we take such a serious step as marriage.

Making Love Deeper, Finer

My opinion is that if two people love each other with the kind of love that is worth while, sickness, disappointment, poverty, and disillusion will not make them hate each other, but will tend to make their love deeper, finer and stronger than it was before. And though to outside appearances they may not continue to "hang their heart on each other's words," they will nevertheless, have learned to know each other for what they really are, and if they are real men and real women, they will smile at the little faults, and always be ready to encourage and help one another.

Don't you really believe, Miss Black, that that doctor's sigh was of discontentment, rather than contentment? Perhaps the doctor and his wife had forgotten to love each other in the busy routine of life, and were both in need of a

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By ANNIE LAURIE

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:— I am a girl of eighteen, I am going with a young man eight years my senior. He has the reputation of being a flirt, yet he has been going with me regularly for six months and always treats me nicely.

Should I think of his courtship seriously? Should I be distant with him? Really I believe I could learn to love him. BLOSSOM.

LOSSOM: Do neither; my dear. Think of the young man as a friend and treat him as one. Do not give him all your time. Go out also with other friends.

DEAR ANNIE LAURIE:— I am a girl in my teens and am coming to you for some advice. I have a young man friend of whom I think a great deal. He has told me that he loves me. He seems jealous of me and doesn't want me to keep company with anyone except him. Shall I go about with other friends as well or just with him? Please advise me how to be more popular. MOLLY.

MOLLY: Since you are not engaged to this young man, he cannot expect you to confine yourself to his friendship alone. You should have many friends, my dear.

If you will interest yourself in others, they are bound to return the interest. Be kind and thoughtful. Always be natural. Be alive, alert and observing. Read, keep posted on the events of the day. You will be popular!

Annie Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. Letters to Miss Laurie should be addressed to her, in care of this office.

good job to stir them out of their own selfish existence, and wake them up to the beauties of the world they live in. Evidently the doctor was wishing in his heart that life time to go over the river was nearer.

P. S. I am hoping that the doctor in your story will see this and read it. Now, now, my dear, don't feel that way about it. The doctor and his wife are as happy as happy can be.

Changing with the Years

Only they're happy in a different way from the happiness which you will find with your brand new husband. People's hearts change, you know, as well as the color of their hair, and the thing that makes you happy at twenty would make you absolutely miserable at fifty. And don't you think the doctor and his wife are wiser to take their own kind of happiness and hold on to it than they would be to try to pretend to feel and think as they did when they were young?

Bless your heart, I hope you and your brand new husband will love each other as you should at your age and I also hope that when you're fifty and he's fifty-five you will be as happy and as fond of each other as the good, humorous, kindly old doctor and his peaceful, contented old wife.

Beauty Treatment to Make Your Skin Smooth

By LUCREZIA BORI

The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

SO many notice that the beauty of their complexions is marred by tiny pimples known as whiteheads. These are very objectionable little blemishes and have a way of appearing from time to time. They may appear in very conspicuous spots on your face, or they may appear about the hair-line and be less conspicuous because your soft tresses curl about your face sufficiently to hide them.

Then again you examine your back sometime in the mirror and are shocked to find that numbers of these ugly little pimples have collected upon your back. These are the symptoms of which so many seekers after beauty complain, and for which they want me to prescribe some treatment.

So many sufferers from skin ailments seem to think that there must be some marvelous beauty cream in the world that would cure them of all skin troubles forever if they could only find the cream.

If you come in the class of sufferers I have just mentioned, you must begin your search for beauty by realizing as keenly as I do that more beauty blemishes come from within than from surface conditions.

Consequently, the one sure cure is to begin by purifying your system. The aliment from within is what causes your skin to break out in beauty-marring blemishes. Nothing applied from the outside can cure this condition permanently—and it can undoubtedly be lastingly cured if you find what the trouble is within, and leave no stone unturned to correct it.

Now in the case of ugly pimples, known as whiteheads, the trouble is very likely to be brought about by too much acid in the system. If this condition exists in a very extreme case, you would do well to consult a physician and follow out a very rigorous course of treatment.

Perhaps you have already had a physician's advice and know the foods you should avoid and the foods you should eat in quantities. I will go over some of the main points to be observed by those who suffer from a too-acid condition. If you have already had a physician's advice on the subject this may refresh your mind, and if you know that your system contains too much acid because of the whiteheads that appear, you will do well to observe the following rules:

The foods you should eat in quantities are the green vegetables that furnish "roughage" of which you have doubtless heard. All green vegetables are good, spinach being particularly recommended. Eat plenty of fruit of all kinds and drink quantities of water. Make a habit of drinking water between meals and drink two glasses at a time, whether you feel thirsty for that amount or not.

Cooked carrots are excellent, and you should try to include these in your diet about once a day, if possible.

Avoid meats to a great extent.

YOUR HEALTH

Care to Be Given Patient Victim of Violent Vomiting

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,

United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

I SHALL never forget one boyhood birthday. I spent it in bed with an illness having violent vomiting as its chief symptom. I had gone out on an exploring expedition and, running short of food, had roasted some field corn. A boy's stomach will digest almost anything short of hardware, but I can testify it won't take care of enormous quantities of roasted field corn.

There is nothing more agonizing than terrible nausea and the retching of violent vomiting. It makes little difference what the fundamental cause may be, the symptoms are practically the same.

The vomited material may be black or brown or clear like water. It may be blood, pure or mixed with food. It may be clotted blood or fluid colored green with bile.

In yellow fever vomiting is so prominent that the disease is sometimes called "black vomit." Alcoholism and poisoning from sewer gas are capable of producing violent vomiting. In kidney disease there may be such poisoning of the system as to cause disturbing symptoms, including violent vomiting.

In certain diseases of the brain, forcible or projectile vomiting is one of the signs. Abscess or bleeding in the brain or tumor, as well as disturbances in the circulation of the brain, may produce the most distressing vomiting, extremely difficult to control.

There is a form of vomiting called "juvenile vomiting," found among overworked school children. It is not in rundown and nervous young people and is undoubtedly hysterical in origin. This rather rare symptom is obstinate and hard to overcome.

In seasickness we have another ailment in which vomiting is the terrible symptom. Disturbance of certain parts of the internal ear may cause similar trouble.

I have observed serious vomiting produced by eyestrain, either from the need of glasses or because of lack of balance in the muscles of the eyeball. Absence of team work in the eyes has caused nausea and violent vomiting.

The vomiting of pregnancy is a familiar example of reflex disturbance. Disease of the womb or ovaries may cause it. The passing of gallstones is another factor. The diet must be restricted to very small quantities of clear broth, ice-cold milk, white of egg, or soft-boiled egg. Sometimes food must be omitted entirely.

Toast water, made by pouring boiling water on toast and straining off the fluid, may be retained. A few sips of ice-cold champagne will stop some attacks of vomiting. Strong tea is helpful at times.

Clear lemon juice, strained and served cold, may be held. If food is not retained rectal feeding may be resorted to in protracted cases.

Holding ice in the mouth is a simple procedure which may arrest the vomiting. Rest in bed, a hot water bag to the feet and cold compresses to the abdomen may control.

Electricity is helpful in other cases.

Answers to Health Questions

D. D. Q.—Is a nap at noontime beneficial for a man of sixty years?

2.—The tip of my nose gets red in cold weather. What can I do to prevent this?

A.—A nap is often beneficial at noontime for a man of your years.

2.—Little if anything can be done for this condition in cold weather.

L. L. Q.—What can I do for red hands?

A.—Use a good cold-cream. B.

Follow these directions carefully, and the blemishes should disappear in time, leaving a smooth, soft skin of which you can be proud.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble
TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 5.

An interesting and generally for untold day is forecast from the prevailing Solar and Lunar configurations. Those in the employment of others may work for benefits or recognition, if undeniably deserving and there may be a rather sudden opportunity for change or advancement. This may bring those qualified into the public eye or into public service. The finances are under a friendly Jupiter and Mercury enlivens all avenues of trade. In so far as domestic affairs, there is a hint of worry.

sure your hands are thoroughly dry before going outdoors.

O. D. Q.—Kindly let me know if a lumbar puncture is harmful to the body.

A.—No there are no symptoms following a lumbar puncture, and it is not harmful to the body when done at the advice of a competent doctor.

MRS. F. B. Q.—I am troubled with indigestion, and about every six months a rash breaks out on my face. What causes this?

A.—The rash probably comes from the absorption of body poisons. Stop feeding and am constantly worrying about my condition. What would you advise me to do?

X. S. Q.—I am extremely sensitive and blush at the slightest provocation. Will you please tell me if this is due to any physical defect as heart trouble or nerves, and whether or not I can be cured?

A.—This is only self-consciousness and you will have to overcome it yourself.

J. A. Q.—I am very nervous and irritable, and am constantly worrying about my condition. What would you advise me to do?

A.—Stop worrying to begin with. Worry never helps. It always hampers. Go to a doctor and be examined, and then follow the doctor's advice.

B. G. Q.—Whenever I am going any place on foot, I always faint. Kindly advise me how to stop this.

A.—This trouble is due to nervous reflex. You must be careful of your habits.

MAGAZINE DAY AT SATURDAY CLUB.

The Saturday Club met last week with Mrs. W. W. Fussell at her lovely home on Ferry street and at this meeting, the program was devoted to the study of magazines.

Mrs. Vera Austelle presided in the absence of Mrs. Penney, the president. Mrs. L. P. Troup took charge of the program and she gave a short sketch of the life of Dr. Frank Crane and also told about a number of his works. Mrs. W. C. Bailey spoke of the "Pathfinder" and Mrs. E. F. Baird of the "Mentor" and each described the contents of these splendid magazines in a delightful way. Mrs. W. J. Garnett's talk on "American Magazines" was exceptionally good and showed her familiarity with the best of these.

Miss Lula Garnett delighted her hearers, as is always the case, with a group of pianologues including "Ashes of Roses" and "Katydids," in both of which she was accompanied by Mrs. A. T. Hanson at the piano.

Late in the afternoon dainty and delicious refreshments were passed by the hostess and her daughter, Carolyn Fussell.

The club enjoyed having with them at this meeting, Misses Lee, Mary Louise Green, Pearson, Lula Garnett and Maud Smith.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Willoughby Presbyterian church met with the president, Mrs. W. R. Alexander at her home on 6th avenue Friday, February 1. The meeting was called to order by the president who also conducted the devotional service.

The officers for the past year were re-elected unanimously. Mrs. W. R. Alexander, president; Mrs. J. H. Call, vice President, Mrs. A. N. Penland Secretary-Treasurer.

After the business session a social hour was enjoyed. Mrs. Penland won the prize in the "word" contest and Mrs. Aubrey Dickens and Miss Freddie Mae Call tied in the peanut guessing contest. During the social hour refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Misses Eugenia Alexander and Freddie M. Call.

Those present were: Mesdames R. V. Gilliam, J. H. Norton, Frank Thornhill, A. Dickens, J. H. Call, W. R. Alexander, J. Wiggins, G. Little, A. N. Penland, W. R. Alexander, Misses Eugenia Alexander and Freddie M. Call new members. Mrs. J. P. Earp and N. Thornhill.

This society has just closed a very successful year and a few months ago purchased a piano for the church. They are looking forward to a better year financially, spiritually and socially. They have enjoyed a number of social affairs recently, the next to be a valentine social to be given Friday evening, February 8 at the home of Mrs. Alexander.

Mrs. J. T. Rainey and daughter, Ernestine, will spend the weekend in Birmingham to attend the Paderewski concert.

Mrs. F. S. Graves and Miss Bessie Tonguitt left yesterday for eastern markets.

Former Citizen Dies in Florence

Funeral services for the late W. C. Buck, formerly a city councilman of Albany and for the past five years a prominent citizen of Florence, where he was engaged as a building contractor, at the time of his death, which occurred Monday morning at his Florence home, will be held at the city cemetery and interment will be there Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Buck is survived by his wife, four sons, C. L. Buck of Albany; M. S. T. N., and C. C. Buck of Birmingham two daughters, Mrs. Jack Austin of Birmingham and Mrs. H. H. Master-son of Florence. The deceased is survived by three brothers, John Buck of Tuscon, Arizona; C. W. Buck and Robert D. Buck of Columbus, Ga., four sisters, Mrs. Miriam Stringer, Mrs. Belle Quarles and Miss Buck, all of Columbus, Ga., and Mrs. Ward Johnson of New York city.

W. C. Buck came here in 1888, and for eight years was a prominent local business man.

For eight years he was a member of the city council when Albany bore the name of New Decatur. He was an active member of the Missionary Baptist church, and was one of the charter members of the First Baptist church of Albany.

What the Press Agents Say

"On the Banks of the Wabash," which was inspired by Paul Dresser's famous song and which will be shown at the Princess theater today is a gripping story laid in a little town along the banks of the Wabash river in the very neighborhood where Dresser lived in his boyhood. It is a gripping heart-interest story with a tremendous climax which includes a remarkable flood and fire sequence essential to the plot.

Mr. Blackton recalled that he himself was one of Dresser's friends when the song writer lived in New York city and that he had approached the translating of Dresser's sentiment to the screen with reverence because of his affection for the Indiana writer.

Prominent members of the Indiana Society of New York city were greatly enthused over the picturization of Dresser's famous song. They realized that the screen immortalizes for all time the beautiful sentiment in the poem which made it the most popular old home song ever written.

"On the Banks of the Wabash" is played by an exceptionally fine cast. In the juvenile roles are found Madge Evans, James Morrison and Mary MacLaren. Mary Carr plays a mother role. Lumsden Hare is seen as an aspiring artist. Burr McIntosh portrays "Cap" Hammond, retired stern-wheeler captain.

PERFECT galvanizing—big wires—full size. A mechanically hinged joint. The right design. Lastly—imitation—the sincerest flattery. Full weight. Full size wire. Full length of rolls. Look for the sign: American Fence. Made by AMERICAN STEEL & WIRE COMPANY

MONTGOMERY WOMAN GRATEFUL TO TANLAC

"The makers of Tanlac will also have my heartfelt gratitude," says Mrs. W. H. Monroe, Sr., of 19 Bullock street, Montgomery, Ala. "In 1919 an attack of flu almost killed me and I never did recover from the effects of it until I took Tanlac."

"Following the flu I had fever all the summer and was in an awful run-down condition. When I began taking tanlac I was only a shadow of my former self. Tanlac just seemed to wake up my appetite and soothe and settle my stomach right from the start and in a short time I was enjoying good health again."

"Since then I have used Tanlac occasionally as a tonic and it keeps to where I can eat anything I want. Tanlac is as fine as anything can be for building up the system making one feel right."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over million bottles sold.

HAD SUBSTITUTE FOR "WEE"

Ancient Romans Used Coltsfoot as Remedy and Also as Tobacco, Says Writer.

The fumes of dried coltsfoot were used as a remedy in case of difficulty in breathing, both in ancient Roman times and in Tudor England. Lytle, in his translation, 1578, of Dodoens' "Historie of Plants," says of coltsfoot: "The perfume of the dried leaves layde upon quicke coles, taken into the mouth through the pipe of a funnell, or tunnell, helpeth such as are troubled with the shortness of winde and fetcheth their breath thicke or often, and do breake without danger the impostumes of the breast."

The leaves of coltsfoot and other plants have often been used as a substitute for tobacco in modern days. A correspondent of Notes and Queries, in 1897, said that when he was a boy he knew an old Calvinist minister who used to smoke a dry mixture of the leaves of horsehoof, yarrow and "coltsfoot" intermingled with a small quantity of tobacco. He said it was a very good substitute for the genuine article.

Similar mixtures, or the leaves of coltsfoot alone, have often been smoked in bygone days by folk who could not afford to smoke tobacco only.

HAD NEVER TASTED CANDY

Hunter in South Africa Discovered Child Who Was Above Sweet Tooth.

It is generally conceded that the affections of a child can be gained, temporarily at least, through gifts of candy. But one kind-hearted old gentleman who has an irrepressible affection for children and always goes around with his pockets full of sweetmeats, which he distributes to his small friends, learned on one occasion that candy was not an open sesame to a child's heart.

He was on a hunting expedition in Africa. His supplies included several tins of tinsel-covered chocolates. Happening to have some of these loose in his pocket one day when far inland he encountered a small native. He produced a couple and endeavored to present them to the wide-eyed two-year-old. They were refused, even when their tinsel wrapping was removed. The youngster had never seen candy and did not know what it was.

The Hasty Departure. Ethel had been warned time and again that she must not keep company with Tom Jones, a young man with a questionable character. But it so happened on this particular night that Ethel's father was the one who greeted the young man as he entered the vestibule of his sweet-heart's home. He no sooner had passed the time of the day than he found himself seated in the middle of the street, assisted by the foot of Ethel's angry father.

Ethel, just having completed her toilet, came downstairs and asked of her father what had become of Tom. "He just went out," replied the father, gruffly. "Gone out? How soon will he be back?" asked his daughter. "Well," replied he, with sarcasm, "if he comes back as quickly as he went out he's due here now."

Advice Came High. The only sure way to command a good price is never to cheapen one's stock in trade.

A Texas justice of the peace received an inquiry from a neighboring city attorney in regard to a judgment that had been entered against a certain client. He inclosed a stamped envelope for reply. Some few days later he received a postal card bearing this information:

"Your inquiry duly received. I beg to inform you that my time is highly valuable just now. Hay cutting is most high here, politics is sizzling hot and automobilism is mighty fine. If you would inclose a dollar bill it might stimulate me some. I paid two once to a lawyer for answering a question, and all he said was 'No.'"

Correct. In a public school recently the children were called upon to write an essay, and at the appointed time little Hugh submitted an effusion on the ark in which he made the statement that Noah fished one day for about five minutes.

When the teacher looked over the composition she was not a little puzzled. She couldn't understand why anybody fond of piscatorial sport should give up in so short a time. "Hugh," she remarked, looking up from the essay, "you say that Noah fished for only five minutes?"

"Because," was the prompt explanation of Hugh, "he didn't have but two worms."—Harper's.

Like a Mule. Pat was standing in the road when he noticed a motor car coming up the street. He stepped back a little.

The car caught up with him and, just as it was passing, the driver had occasion to turn off down a side street. As he moved the steering wheel the car skidded, causing the back end of it to swing around, striking Pat and knocking him down.

Pat was seen to get up and look after the car and say: "Now, what do ye think o' that? When ye stand in front o' them they run over ye, and when ye get out o' the way to let them pass they turn around and kick ye."

BAPTIST SPEAKERS AT LOCAL CHURCHES

There will be services in every Baptist church in the twin-cities every night this week. The hour is 7:30 p. m. Tonight Rev. W. P. Reeves and Mrs. A. T. Hanson will speak at the Decatur church, Rev. C. C. Davison and Mrs. E. M. Esby at the First church Albany, Deacon J. D. Garret and Mrs. S. D. Monroe at the South-side church, Rev. E. F. Olive and Mrs. W. J. Garnett at the Central church while Rev. S. D. Monroe and Mrs. H. P. Webb will appear at the Austinville church.

This week of prayer is being observed in every Southern State and a large interest is expected. Emphasis will be laid on personal consecration, stewardship and the different South wide objects fostered by the Baptist convention. With the information imparted is expected to come a larger inspiration for a larger service.

R. K. Balch Dead at El Paso, Texas

The remains of R. K. Balch for many years a mail carrier here, and later in New Mexico and Texas, accompanied by the family of the deceased, are expected here early this week from El Paso, Texas, where Mr. Balch died Saturday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

Word of the death of Mr. Balch was received here by officials of the Albany Junior Order of American Mechanics, No. 22, of which body the deceased was a member. He is survived by his wife and one child. One brother living at Huntsville survives him. A number of relatives of the deceased live in this section.

Sometime ago Mrs. Balch wrote to friends here that the end of her husband's life seemed near. He secured a transfer from the post office department to New Mexico in July 1918, stated J. C. Smith who was in the mail service about that time.

It was announced here later today that the body will arrive here Thursday morning. Funeral services will be conducted Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock by the Junior Order from the Central Baptist church.

Judge Allen Dies at Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 4.—Stunned by the news that ex-President Wilson was slowly dying the community of Birmingham and the entire state sustained its second great shock Sunday in the death of Judge Basil M. Allen, 65, one of the foremost southern lawyers and a figure long identified with the development of this section.

Judge Allen died at his residence, 2230 Highland avenue, Sunday morning at 8 o'clock, from hardening of the arteries. That the end was not wholly unexpected will not, so it is poignant sting to the vast number of friends he had made in his successful career.

TAKES OWN LIFE

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 4.—Fred S. Charlton, president of the Ozard Co. and Lumber company, which was recently placed in the hands of receivers, died today from an overdose of drugs, taken with suicidal intent, according to a statement from his physician.

Lives in the Mud.

Some fish are very particular in regard to the purity of the water in which they live, says Nature Magazine, but not so the catfish, for it will live and thrive in the muddiest and most stagnant waters. If the air supply of water becomes deficient it will rise to the surface and breathe in air through the mouth.

ARGUMENTS HEARD IN CANDLER CASE

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 4.—Motion for direction of a verdict in favor of Asa G. Candler, Sr., was overruled by Judge Sibley in federal court here today in the case of Mrs. De Bouchel of New Orleans, who is suing the Atlanta millionaire for $500,000 for breach of promise.

The attorneys for Mr. Candler had requested a direct verdict because they declared Mrs. De Bouchel was legally married at the time she and that evidence sufficient to allow a recovery or damages has not been presented because engaged to the Atlanta capitalist, Judge Sibley, in overruling the motion, said the question was one for the jury to decide.

The lawyers for the defense were pleading the case before the jury, each side being allowed two hours for argument.

Schools to Render Memorial Program

At the regular chapel exercises held this morning at the Albany high school, the death of former President Woodrow Wilson was formally announced. A sketch of the life of Mr. Wilson was given also. It is the intention of the schools of Albany, under Superintendent Wade, at a later date to hold fitting exercises in connection with the death of President Wilson.

Flags Here Are at Half Mast

The flags on the school buildings, municipal buildings and other public buildings and on the business houses, were at half mast today and will remain so for thirty days on account of the death on Sunday morning at 11:15 o'clock of ex-President Woodrow Wilson.

Plans are being made by authorities of the cities and of the public schools for a suitable recognition of the great war President.

Both Superintendent Wade, of the Albany schools and Superintendent Benson, of the Decatur schools, stated Monday that the schools would take some action soon looking to a suitable recognition of the life, character and services of the former President.

The sight of the flags at half mast renewed sorrow felt by many for the death of Mr. Wilson. On Sunday with few exceptions, either in their prayers or in their sermon discourses pastors of the Twin Cities made touching references to the death of Mr. Wilson.

There's a Difference.

Men are much more unwilling to have their weaknesses and their imperfections known than their crimes; and if you hint to a man that you think him silly, ignorant, or even ill-bred, or awkward, he will hate you more and longer than if you tell him plainly you think him a rogue.

Flop of Star Fish.

If a starfish is turned over upon its upper surface it rights itself by bending two arms backward until they are beneath the disc and then lifting until it falls on its lower surface, says Nature Magazine. If the nerve-ring, which encircles the mouth, is severed the animal cannot right itself.

No Laundries in China.

Laundries are unknown in China. This is strange when it is considered that an overwhelming proportion of the Chinese in America are engaged in laundry work.

MANY are the eyes that are turned to gaze with keen admiration on the well developed, healthy girl no matter where she may be—on the rapidly moving thoroughfare or gliding gracefully over the dance floor.

All eyes turn because we all appreciate the girl with the figure so firm and plump—the girl with radiantly red cheeks, cheeks that carry a touch of roses from nature's own garden—the girl with the sparkling eyes, keen and sharp—the girl with buoyancy and the swing of youth.

Not necessarily an out-of-door girl. Just a girl with ever increasing blood cells. Just a girl filled with the vim and vigor of youth.

S. S. S. since 1858 has stood for increased blood cells. S. S. S. means restored strength—renewed vitality—added energy. Take S. S. S. and watch the bloom of youth return to your cheeks. Watch that flabby, ill nourished flesh fade away before flesh that is firm and plump. Red blood cells will do it and S. S. S. will build them. It contains only pure vegetable ingredients. S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is more economical.

She Is Not for Sale

That's the way a lot of families feel about good old Bossy. She has been a faithful friend of the family, giving all the milk they could use and even some for the neighbors.

Of course you always think that you feed her well, but do you? Just plenty of feed does not always mean proper feeding. Good old Bossie must have a ration that she can really turn into milk.

Cow Chow produces more milk and more butter fat because it contains elements that are deficient in the average ration. It keeps cows from robbing their bodies for milk-making nutrients and lengthens the milking period. By feeding Cow Chow you not only produce more pounds of milk, but you keep your cow in better condition.

Just try Cow Chow for a month, feed it as directed, and watch the difference.

Bootleg Liquor Getting Cheaper and Worse, Says Governor Pinchot, Attacking Law Enforcement Failure

Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, known as a fighter for what he believes is right, has asked for a Congressional investigation of the Treasury Department's alleged failure to enforce the prohibition law.

"The greatest breeder of crime and criminals in America," he declares, "is the failure to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. Out of the knowledge of criminals that the bars are down grows murder, brigandage, piracy, poisoning, and a multitude of other crimes of violence or cunning, in addition to the violation of the Amendment itself."

"The dangerous situation in which we find ourselves is due to one main cause, and one only. Whatever may be said of the effect of the war, it is true that the failure of the United States Government to do its plain and simple duty under the law is the main cause of lawlessness today. Immunity for crimes against the Eighteenth Amendment has encouraged other crimes until today we face a situation in which not only the criminal classes but the great bulk of honest citizens throughout the country is firmly convinced that the Government does not really intend to enforce the law.

Bootleg Prices Falling
"The plain fact is that violation of the Eighteenth Amendment has become a highly organized business—a business far more highly and effectively organized than law enforcement. And the simple and obvious proof is that prices of bootleg liquor, in Washington, for example, are not rising but falling, because it is easier and less expensive to violate the law than it used to be. There is the whole situation in a nutshell."

"Take it by and large, I know of no scandal in our national history to compare with it. A scandal of half these proportions in any other branch of the Government's work would lead at once to a Congressional investigation. In the name of the citizens of this country who believe in its Constitution and laws, and who propose to support and enforce them, I voice the general demand for such an investigation."

When Lotteries Were Lawful.

In the Eighteenth century lotteries were extremely popular in America. Legislatures authorized them for every species of public improvement, for the building of churches and colleges, for the repair of losses to individuals by fire and otherwise; for example, Faneuil hall, after the fire of 1761, was rebuilt by lottery. The Continental congress tried to raise money by lottery in 1777.

Books as Levelers.
Books are the true levelers. They give to all who faithfully use them the society, the spiritual presence of the greatest and best of our race.

Is It Funny?

It is funny about some "realistic" novelists that they never write about any likable people, yet there are lots of them.

DORIS DISCOVERS A SECRET.
ONE day as Doris wandered through the meadows, she came across the dearest little flowers tucked among the crevices of rocks.

The tiny blossoms, which dangled from slender stems, looked like tiny fairy breeches. They were white, faintly tipped with yellow.

Doris was just about to gather a handful when a tiny voice stopped her.

"Oh, please, little Doris, don't pick my pretty blossoms," begged the tiny voice, "for I've promised every one of them to the Good Fairy. Please don't pick them."

"Certainly I won't unless you want me to," laughed Doris and she sat down beside the lovely, slender plant. "But what in the world does the Good Fairy want with your blossoms?"

"Can you keep a secret?" asked the tiny plant. Doris nodded her

"Please Don't, Little Doris."

yellow curls. "Then I'll tell you. The Good Fairy is having a party in the meadow to-night. She has asked that I loan her my jewelry and I promised her I would."

"But what has that to do with your pretty blossoms, I'd like to know?" laughed Doris. She couldn't see anything but the tiny white, breeches-like blossoms. "Where do you keep your jewels, anyway?"

"Of course," sighed the little plant sadly. "I guess you're just like the rest of the folks. Hardly a week passes when I do not hear someone cry out, 'Oh, look at the Dutchman's breeches!'"

"If they only knew how it hurt my pride, they wouldn't call me 'Dutchman's breeches.' Of course at the first glance, one does think of breeches. The other day the Good Fairy passed just after someone had made that remark about my blossoms and she found me in tears."

"But they do look like Dutchman's breeches," insisted Doris.

"Certainly they do," replied the tiny plant. "But they look like ear-drops, too, don't they?"

"Upon my word!" Doris laughed. "They certainly do look like ear-drops now that you've called my attention to it."

"Well, that's what Good Fairy said. She's giving this party to-night and intends to wear a pair to show folks how lovely they look."

"They plant shook out her blossoms quite bravely. 'Fairy Ear-drops is a much sweeter name for my flower. Don't you think so?'"

"Indeed I do," replied Doris. "And from now on, I shall tell every child that I know to call you 'Fairy Ear-drops.' I like that name so much better than 'Dutchman's Breeches.' Is that the reason you hide here in the deep woods—because you feel badly about your name?"

"Oh, no," Tiny Plant laughed. "We Dutchman's Breeches—or, better, Fairy Ear-drops—always choose the deep woods to live in because we love cool nooks and the drip of dew from the trees. You'll find flowers that grow in the deep woods need very little light. We don't require much light, you see, because our blossoms are so pale."

Just then Doris heard her mama calling, so bidding her friend good-by, she hurried home.

WANTS HEARING

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4.—William G. McAdoo telegraphed Senator Walsh, of the Committee investigating oil leases, asking arrangements to be made for him to appear before the committee.

Mr. McAdoo's telegram to Senator Walsh quoted statement he had issued relative to E. L. Donhey's testimony as to legal relations with the Donhey oil companies. In conclusion he stated that he was leaving for Washington and asked the Senator to make arrangement for his appearance.

Mr. McAdoo received $150,000, not $250,000, as stated by Donhey for legal services to the Donhey companies, according to a declaration made at McAdoo's offices here late today.

BRITAIN HAS FIRST LABOR MINISTER

Ramsay MacDonald, Scottish pacifist, is the first Labor Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary ever named in Great Britain. Among his Laborite Cabinet Ministers are John Robert Clynes, President of the National Union of General Workers, who is Lord Privy Seal and Deputy Government Leader in the House of Commons; Lord Haldane, as Lord Chancellor; Philip Snowden, Socialist "Intellectual," as Chancellor of the Exchequer; Arthur Henderson, former labor and trade union leader, as Home Secretary; J. H. Thomas, railway union chief, as Secretary of State for Colonies; Baron Parmoor, leading pacifist, as Lord President of Council and Government leader in the House of Lords, and Sidney Webb, another labor "Intellectual," as Secretary of the Board of Trade.

New York Letter

by Lucy Jeanne Price

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—What better

introduction could a girl ask than finding a man's lost bankbook. The com-combination of gratitude on his part and the comfortable assurance on hers that he really had a bank account and that it showed several thousand dollars intact would be bright auspices for any romance. Consequently there cannot be surprise that Joseph J. Capello who lost the bankbook, and Elizabeth

D. Love, who found it and returned it to him, are now married and happily on their way to Bermuda for a honeymoon.

The next thing we know, we'll be dancing to bagpipes instead of saxa-phones. White heather has been approved by fashion to take the place this season of the traditional orange blossom on the bride's veil; Scotch suits are filling our women's shops;

and now comes the news that Scotch plaids have once again come to the fore among our sport hosiery. When we have ventured into plaids at all since the short skirt became so definitely short, it has been only into browns and tans, or greys gently crossed with black. But this spring, it is quite another thing. Blues and greens in good inch plaids dominated the alluring sport hose tables at the Onyx showrooms when I dropped in this week to learn the latest modes.

Not only in wool, either. The makers have taken cognizance of our desire to look sportively gay in summer weather and have given us in lustre cotton and mercerized lisle everything that has attracted us in the heavy weaves. They have considered, too, those who may not yearn for plaided ankles, and the decorous and really lovely blue and white fine plaided are quite as smart, while for the exceedingly distinctive dresser, there are all silk sport hose in true Paisley patterns. It will be a lively season on the links.

Feminine competition is wedging 'r everywhere. The first woman accusced of bookmaking in this part of the country has just been given a suspended sentence by the New York courts for her activities.

Black brick is a new and rather startling choice for office buildings

Having seen blocks of everything else in our city, an enterprising architect in an effort to overcome monotony those that sombre material for a sky-scraper being erected on my street. It is really, exceedingly striking, and with gold colored stone trim-min, it isn't actually gloomy. But I dread to think of the effect if it becomes a popular scheme and we live and work in canyons of black brick walls.

Katherine Cornell is once again the star in a play by Clemence Dane, This playwright and lovely young actress seem particularly well suited to interpreting each other's talents, and the new Dane play, 'The Way Things

Happen' is another proof of that fact. It is the story of a girl's sacrifice for the man she loves, and that of itself doesn't sound new. In the handling of the theme, however, the author has achieved another triumph of the drama in some of the futilities of every day life. Tom Nesbitt plays the role of the selfish, not very admirable, man in the case and plays it ex-

WORDS of WISE MEN

Among the greatest gifts of the gods to men is patience though man do not consider it so.

Let the righteous sing praises of their righteousness if they have really been tempted to do wrong.

The castles on the Rhine are monuments to men whose existence should never be commemorated.

The man who raises a family of fine children and starts them well in life has deserved more of his country than a successful general.

The rank is but the guinea stamp, the man's the gold for all that.

Good fellows in the tavern are often bad fellows in their homes.

What a cruel heart it must need to order men into battle. Dead men should haunt a general's pillow.

You'll never reach the rainbow's end, but if you pursue it you may find rewards along the road.

The lion may be the king of beasts, but it's lucky for him he doesn't live in the climate which reeds grizzly bears.

If men ever sprout wings and sail through the sky, they still will not be angels.

Happy is the man whose wife is stingy. Women's extravagance is the downfall of most men.

Words, once spoken, cannot be wiped out with a sponge.

If Juliet washed for Romeo...

Well, of course, nothing so prosaic as washing ever troubled Romeo and Juliet.

But just suppose they had started in housekeeping in a nice little kitchenette apartment with Murphys-in-the-wall and hot and cold janitors, and suppose the laundry wagon went along their street every week—

Don't you think it would have stopped at their house?

We're sure of it.

WALLACE-BROCK Soliciting Agency

These two boys have formed a partnership soliciting agency with headquarters in the office of L. B. Wyatt and Son, on Bank Street, soliciting prospects to go to the Rio Grande Valley, Texas, the greatest citrus fruit country in the world. The climate equals any in the United States and the soil is superior, being especially adapted to the raising of citrus fruits. They are the sole agents for the Doss-Gates Realty Company, of Weslaco, Texas, right in the heart of the valley. Mr. Doss is a nephew of C. C. Doss, of Hartselle, and a native of Lawrence county. Anyone contemplating going out at an early date will do well to see these parties at once as they have some very attractive inducements to offer. They have a party leaving Saturday, February 9th. Mr. Wallace is in the office at all times.
